EVERY WOMAN OUGHT TO TEACH SCHOOL
SO SHE'LL KNOW HOW TO BE A MOTHER

ELLA FLAGG YOUNG AS SHE LOOKS TODAY.

BY ELLA FLAGG YOUNG.

After 51 years of labor in the public schools I have resigned as superintendent of the Chicago schools because I have no desire, at my age, to fight merely to hold my position.

Politics is said to be a beautiful game, but I do not care to play it.

The antagonism toward me and my educational policies seems personal. If I were fighting for a principle I could still battle for what I thought was right, but to have a continual fight to retain my office is not worth the effort, not when you are 68!

Looking back over the last half century of school work I find very much that is pleasant and very little that is annoying.

When I became a school teacher it was about the only profession a woman could enter without great opposition and even today the woman lawyers and doctors find it very hard work to reach the highest places in their professions.

It was even thought a wonderful thing when I, a woman, was appointed superintendent of the Chicago schools, but my incumbency of four years is going to make it much easier for the next woman superintendent—and there will be women at the head of the schools all over the country in the near future!

You will also see more men as school teachers in the future, for every year the other professions are becoming easier for us and women of brilliant minds are going to adopt them and then—THEIR places—the women's will have to be filled by men!

I have been asked if I would advise a young woman to become a school teacher. I think for the good of her husband and children that every girl should teach school a while before her marriage.

Possibly the schools might suffer a little (for every woman is not born a school teacher any more than she is born a wife and mother) but THE RACE WOULD BENEFIT.

It is the woman—the individual, however, which determines success in any profession or business.

It is a pleasant memory to me that I have helped to fit thousands of girls and boys who have come under my half century of work in the schools to better themselves as individuals and citizens, and it is a great joy to know, at the end of my school life, that more women are every day becoming citizens of this great country in reality as well as name. Each year the teaching in the common schools is broadening out and making every child more able to care for himself.

To have helped in this great work has made my life worth living and I shall go on helping some way until the end.

A special meeting of the Ladies' auxiliary of Trinity M. E. church was well attended Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Stephen Holland, 323 Portage av. Plans were made for a party to be held Aug. 16. A regular meeting of the auxiliary will be held Aug. 7 with Mrs. F. L. Axtell, 1021 Portage av.

Wright were the assisting hostesses. The affair was in the form of a thimble during which refreshments were served by Miss Inez Defrees and Miss Dollie Wright. In two weeks the hostesses will be Miss Jennie Rulo, Miss Hackman, Mrs. Snell and Mrs. Martha Loughman.

Oat-Meal Bread.

Pour two cups of boiling water over one and one-half cups of oat-meal. Stir well and let stand until luke warm. Then add three-fourths cup of molasses, one tea-spoon each of soda and salt, one cup raisins or nuts, one compressed yeast cake.

Stir all together and add white flour to make a very stiff batter and let raise over night.

In the morning cut down with knife and put into two medium sized bread pans. Let rise until light and bake in medium hot oven for one hour.

It makes delicious sandwiches for picnics, Mrs. Paxson says.

DR. THOMSON'S
EYE TALKS
(TALK NO. 154.)

What Glasses Do.

There is nothing secret or mysterious about the action of lenses upon the eye. They simply place it in perfect focus, that is all. You can see a splendid illustration of this action at any time by looking at a stereoscopic picture. If the instrument is not in focus the picture is blurred. If it is a picture of a business street you can see lettering on the signs over the stores but not distinctly enough to read it. You feel that it tires your eyes to look at it. If the operator turns the adjustment screw ever so slightly the picture comes out clear and distinct. You can read the signs and your eyes feel that the strain is removed. Fitting glasses to an eye that is out of focus is exactly the same to that eye as turning the adjustment screw in the instrument. The picture upon the retina of the eye is brought out clear and distinct. There is no longer any cause for the delicate muscles of the eye to make an effort to see better. Vision is improved, strain is removed and the eyes placed in a normal, healthy condition.

He says if the owner of the ring will pay for the chickens, the ring will be returned and he will not file charges.
